Overview of Penn State Athletics Internships

Penn State athletics internships are structured programs designed to integrate academic learning with practical work experience in the sports industry. These internships are typically offered through the Penn State Athletics Department and affiliated units, providing opportunities across multiple sports and administrative functions. Interns work alongside experienced professionals and gain insights into the operational side of collegiate athletics.

The program aims to foster professional development by exposing interns to real-world challenges and responsibilities in sports management, marketing, communications, and athlete services. Penn State's commitment to excellence in athletics ensures that internships are well-supervised and aligned with industry standards, making them highly sought-after by students studying sports management, communications, business, and related fields.

Types of Internships Available

There are various types of Penn State athletics internships tailored to different interests and career goals within the sports realm. These internships span multiple departments and focus areas, allowing interns to engage in meaningful projects and tasks that complement their academic studies.

Marketing and Promotions Internships

Interns in marketing and promotions assist in developing and executing campaigns to increase fan engagement and attendance at athletic events. Responsibilities may include managing social media accounts, coordinating promotional activities, and creating marketing materials.

Event Management Internships

Event management interns play a critical role in planning and executing athletic competitions and special events. This includes tasks such as logistics coordination, venue preparation, and liaising with vendors and stakeholders to ensure smooth event operations.

Communications and Media Relations Internships

Interns in communications support media relations efforts by writing press releases, preparing game notes, assisting with live event coverage, and maintaining the athletics website and social media channels. This role is ideal for students interested in sports journalism and public relations.

Athlete Services and Support Internships

These internships focus on providing support services to student-athletes, including academic advising, compliance monitoring, and wellness programs. Interns gain exposure to the athlete experience and the administrative efforts that promote their success.

Application and Eligibility Requirements

Applying for Penn State athletics internships involves meeting specific eligibility criteria and following a structured application process. Eligibility typically requires students to be enrolled at Penn State University or affiliated institutions, with a strong interest in sports management or related disciplines.

The application process generally includes submitting a resume, cover letter, and sometimes letters of recommendation. Candidates may be required to participate in interviews to assess their fit for the internship role. Deadlines and application windows vary depending on the department and internship cycle.

Key eligibility factors often include:

- Enrollment as a full-time student at Penn State or partner institutions
- Relevant academic background or coursework in sports management, communications, business, or similar fields
- Strong communication and organizational skills
- Ability to commit to the internship schedule and responsibilities
