Understanding the Four Dichotomies of MBTI

The Myers-Briggs personality test PDF assesses individuals according to four dichotomies, each representing opposite preferences. These dichotomies form the foundation for understanding personality types and behaviors.

Extraversion (E) vs. Introversion (I)

This dimension reflects where individuals focus their energy. Extraverts are energized by social interaction and external activities, while introverts prefer solitary or small-group environments and internal contemplation.

Sensing (S) vs. Intuition (N)

The sensing versus intuition dichotomy describes how people process information. Sensors rely on concrete, factual details and practical experience, whereas intuitives focus on patterns, possibilities, and abstract concepts.

Thinking (T) vs. Feeling (F)

This scale indicates decision-making preferences. Thinkers prioritize logic, objectivity, and consistency. Feelers emphasize values, empathy, and the impact of decisions on others.

Judging (J) vs. Perceiving (P)

Judging and perceiving pertain to lifestyle and approach to the external world. Judging types prefer structure, planning, and decisiveness, while perceiving types favor flexibility, spontaneity, and adaptability.
